

NCR ENTERPRISE ANALYTICS

Retail and Distribution Industries

Financial results should never be a surprise

Yet, too often, bottom-line numbers and the key performance indicators (KPIs) they represent are given to the management team at “the end”—of the month, the quarter or even the close of the year.

With these long delays, however, it’s too late to make strategic changes that can positively impact a company’s success. But what if managers had continual insight into specific KPIs, as well as the detailed data that creates the indicators that are so critical to a company’s success?

Now they can, with NCR Enterprise Analytics. Using a simple graphical interface, Enterprise Analytics provides statistics that reveal how individual components of a distributor’s business are performing—right now. Team members in sales, procurement, finance and other departments can take immediate, positive action.

As each KPI is carefully monitored and moved in the right direction, your bottom line moves up as well.

- Provides corporate insight into operational and financial information
- Reveals whether the business is on track—right now
- Measures progress of KPIs over time
- Offers timely, accurate data for strategic and operational decision-making
- Highlights exception reporting and enhances inter-departmental communication

The Intelligent Business Intelligence Solution

It's all here, at a single glance. With NCR Enterprise Analytics, one look reveals a wealth of information about daily operational, sales, procurement and financial activity.

With Enterprise Analytics, what sounds complicated actually becomes quite simple. Each day, this robust supply chain business intelligence (BI) tool extracts data from NCR Power Enterprise. Users view a graphically—driven dashboard, where they can customize the exact data they want to be displayed.

Most importantly, team members from sales, procurement and finance departments can slice-and-dice the data in any number of ways.

Each key performance indicator can be analyzed further, revealing detailed data about particular items, vendors, prices, accounts, locations, divisions, warehouses and more. Areas of weakness become immediately apparent.

Even better, areas of strength are revealed for further analysis, creating best practices for the company. That's why adding NCR Enterprise Analytics to your own team is one of the best decisions you can make—right now!
